Come to theatre camp this year and experience the joy of creating your own show! Students will work together to create a new theatrical piece through original text, poetry, puppetry, and dance. Camp focuses on ensemble-building, learning through theatre games, and fostering the creativity of the campers to build a show unique to the young artists. Campers will collaborate to design and build their own set and costumes, create choreography, and explore the dramaturgy behind their show (yes, even the little ones!)

This year, campers will create a play about the plight of the North Atlantic Right Whale, a species of whale that is not only mysterious and captivating, but critically endangered. Students will have the opportunity to learn about the form of ecological theatre through the creation of this piece.
